I drew this art because I think it represents what Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. truly stood for. This artwork states how you must make a choice to take a chance or your life will never change. Most people just go through life expecting everything to come to them by sitting there and not doing anything. Dr. King thought differently, he knew he would have to make hard decisions and take a chance on something so he could truly have a positive change on other lives. This artwork shows a man having to choose between two paths. In my mind, the paths are between doing what is right to make change and getting judged or just letting people get hurt because you're scared. Dr. King put his life on the line to make change so others could live freely.
